'Boom' – A solo show about people and bombs

Comedy theatre veteran in debut solo effort

Andrew Connor, one-half of comedy theatre duo The Cody Rivers Show (www.codyrivers.com), makes his solo show debut in 'Boom', the tale of a sentimental bomb-maker's tangled relations with the calculating denizens of his desperate hometown.

Audiences follow the rise and fall of the town of New Rockwell and its struggle to come to terms with the return of a native son who brings with him a dangerous plan to revive this dying city.

"In 'Boom', Connor plays an entire cast of characters ranging from a precocious child to a pair of doddering retirees. Each has a different voice and body and Connor changes from one to the other at a dizzying pace, never blurring the edges. That, in itself, is an astonishing feat and well worth seeing.

But the play is also a provocative and funny take on the human penchant for destruction...The only bomb not mentioned is the theatrical variety and this show is in no danger of that." -The Whatcom Independent
